

Schools are a critical element of stability in the lives of students. This is especially true during times of deployment, crisis, or family separation. Schools can help children and families cope with difficult times.

Talk to your child's teachers, counselor, or Principal and ask for their help in maintaining stability and normalcy in your child's life.

We have counseling services available to all students and can suggest alternative assistance if there is a need.

Our DoDDS–Europe schools are here for you.
